Private Manuscript Collections in the North Carolina State Archives

By Idalia Hicks and Lynne White Belvin

The Private Manuscript Collections are often overlooked by beginning researchers. They are a wealth of information and are divided into three sections:

- Private Collections – Includes all papers classified as private collections, except those on microfilm. The number preceding the title of each collection is the "P.C." or call number.
- Microfilm Private Collection – Some of these relate to other collections. These have been catalogued separately and have been give "Mf.P" call numbers.
- Account Books – These are catalogued and shelved separately with "A.B." call numbers. When account books relate to a private collection, an appropriate cross reference has been used.

For a listing of the holdings, consult Guide to Private Manuscript Collections in The North Carolina State Archives by Barbara T. Cain, Ellen Z. McGrew, and Charles E. Morris. You may find it in your local library or for sale through the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, Division of Archives and History, 109 East Jones Street, Raleigh, North Carolina 27601-2807.

- For Sale - An excellent Singer's sewing machine. It is new, having been used only about one month, and sold for no fault. Price $200.
- A TOUCHING INCIDENT - We are credibly informed, that during the bloody fight of Monday at Williamsburg Va., in which our 14th regiment participated, that during the heat of the battle, Mr. John M. BECK, of this County, a private in the Oak City Guards, heard a cry from that part of the field between the two armies, piteously exclaiming, "Oh, give me water -- water!" His heart was touched, and immediately getting on his knees, he crawled to the place and found a Yankee soldier wounded, crying for water. He immediately applied his canteen to his mouth, and the poor fellow drank what he wanted, and thanked him. BECK immediately returned to his position and fought bravely until the close of the day. Such an act of noble generosity to a suffering enemy deserves to be recorded.
- DIED - In Richmond, Va., at the Winder Hospital, on the 16th inst., Sergeant Charles W. ROBERTSON, of the "Raleigh Rifles," of Camp Fever, in the 19th year of his age. Sergeant R. is spoken

He was taken prisoner and kept on a vessel about three weeks, and was then sent to the hospital, where he stayed some four weeks - was then paroled and returned home. His disease was a low type of fever, which baffled the skill of his physicians.

- LINES - Written on the death of a beautiful Soldier Boy, in the 17th year of his age, Silas J. HOLLEMAN, of Wake County, NC, who died in the Hospital at Ashland, Va., on the 14th of April, 1862:

Thou art gone to thy rest Silas,
Why should we weep for thee,
For thou art now where oft on earth
Thy Spirit longed to be.

Thou wert beautiful on earth Silas,
But now I know thy face
Is like a brilliant diamond,
Bedecked with heavenly grace.

Thou art gone to thy home Silas,
Where the sound of the drum
No more with familiar tap,
Shall invite thee to come.

Forever rest in heaven Silas,
May all your friends by true;
And when their days are ended,
May they be angels too.

Thou art gone to thy rest Silas:
Thy sins are forgiven:
With angels of light
Thou hast gone up to heaven.

Then parents, weep not for Silas,
The cares of life with him are done;
Yea, give him up, and meekly pray,
To meet him in eternal day.

Watch for "Old Survey" in Land Grants

By Jo Ann Becker
Reprinted from the Onslow County Genealogical Society Newsletter, July 1989.

When you're checking North Carolina land grants from the period of about 1778-1782, check to see if there is a reference to the land applicant's "old survey." If so, that usually means the land was surveyed earlier, and the application was expected to be processed through Lord GRANVILLE's office, but the paperwork wasn't completed prior to the closing of the offices (which was about March 1763).

The land application would have been made prior to the closing, which usually means the land applicant had been in the geographical area since 1763. So this gives an idea the man had probably in the area during that period of time.

Example: If you find a 1779 North Carolina land grant mentioning the applicant's "old survey" (and the land is within the area which was covered by the Granville land Office), there is a strong possibility that the person was in the area, at least by 1763.

Preserving Documents

1. Make a high quality photocopy of the item, and safely store the original.

2. Do not frame and hang an original document. Light will fade the ink and discolor the paper.

3. Remove all pressure tape. Better yet, don't use any kind of tape unless it is a cellulose fiber tape. Filmoplast P is suggested.

4. Some documents may be cleaned with Opaline, Absorene wallpaper cleaner, or Magic Rub vinyl erasers. Rub very gently, and use a soft brush to dist. Don't rub off the surface of the document.

5. Slip documents into acid-free polyester folders or envelopes. These are available in office supply stores.

6. Store your document carefully in a cold, dry, dark place.

Preservation and Publication of North Carolina Historic Documents

A well-trained genealogist will view even an official record in the light of the attitude of the recording official. In order to be successful in this, it becomes imperative to have an understanding of the social mores prevalent within the regional culture at that time.

While it is true that the majority of the settlers, in what would become the United States of America, were of English stock, it did not mean that they held common views on important matters. Much of this difference came from the cultural attitudes of their places of origins.

The Puritan settlers of New England came from the East Anglia area of England and the northeastern fringe of Kent. In New England the most important unit of government was the town followed by the county. The names given to these towns reflected the areas in England where they had lived prior to their migration. We see the names Haverhill, Ispwich, Lynn, Cambridge, Dedham, Groton, Boston, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, and Framington to mention a few. By the same token, you can see origins in names given to Virginia counties, i.e., Surry, Sussex, Isle of Wight, Southampton, Norfolk, Essex. One can also see the Royalist connection in county names, i.e., James City Co. (for King James I), King William, King & Queen Co., Prince George, Charles City (for King Charles).

The settlers, movers, and shakers, of Colonial Virginia came from the south and west of England. These were areas that were predominately Cavalier/Royalist and of the Anglican faith. Their beliefs in regard to the privileges of the ruling class as well as their view of morals, social customs, and laws were generally far different than their fellow colonists in the New England area.

An example of this divergence of thought can be seen in the punishment of couples accused of marital infidelity, or fornication. In our northern colony, the man would be more severely punished, while in the south the woman would bear the more strenuous discipline. The primary reason for this difference in attitudes lay in centuries of culture conditioning. Southerners, coming as they did from an area that was ruled by Royalist families, felt that marital fidelity in a wife was essential to preserve the purity of the bloodline. They did not, however, extend this view to the males in their society. In fact men were expected to be sexual predators during the course of their adult lives, or as long as nature allowed them to do so!

In reading the historic documents of North Carolina you will notice a lamentable lack of mention of women. Even in court references, a woman would be referred to as “the widow of Thomas Jones.” You may find her given name if her husband sells a piece of property after their marriage as she had to relinquish her dower rights in that property. For the genealogist in NC, often the most difficult task they face is finding the maiden name of a female ancestor prior to 1868.

The earliest official record regarding what would become North Carolina began in 1622 with John PORY’s expedition to the Albemarle Sound region. In his reports to the VA Governor and Council, he referred to it as South Virginia.

In 1629 King Charles I gave this region south of Virginia to his friend, Sir Robert HEATH and renamed the area Carolina. Neither he nor HEATH encouraged settlers to go to Carolina.

Thirty-one years later (1650) Edward BLAND explored the Chowan, Meherrin, and Roanoke river valleys. He wrote a book about his exploration titled Discoverie of New Brittaine. His descriptions of the fertile river valleys, as well as abundance of game and supply of building material, painted a glowing picture of the area.

On March 1st, 1662 George DURANT bought a tract of land from the Yeopim Indians in what is now Perquimans County. This is the oldest land grant in NC. It is also interesting to note that the family bible of George DURANT is the oldest extant Bible in NC. It is a part of the Southern Historical Collection at the Lewis Round Wilson Library, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill campus.

Between 1629 and 1662 events occurred in England that had direct bearing on the destiny of the southern colony. Charles I was beheaded, and Cromwell took over control of England. Due to the persecution of Royalists during the Cromwellian period, many of these "distressed Royalists" migrated to the Virginia Colony which was known for it's Royalists views. The majority of these newcomers were related either by blood or marriage to the ruling families of Virginia. Welcomed as a part of their extended families by members of Virginia's "polite society," they were quick to remark how much like England was this part of the colonies. Of course, we hasten to add that they meant how much like their part of England was the colony of Virginia.

By 1662 Charles II had been restored to the throne of England. By 1663 he had punished those responsible for the regicide of his father and had begun to reward those who had helped him regain the throne. Among those he rewarded were eight men to whom he granted the Charter for Carolina. These men were given the title of Lord Proprietor. The grant given them ran from the VA border to what is present day Cape Kennedy, FL and from the Atlantic Ocean westward to the seas. In effect these men owned the southern half of what would become the United States.

It is interesting to note that one of these Proprietors was Governor William BERKELEY of VA. He acted for the other Proprietors who remained in England. Because of his station as governor of VA, many of the earliest Proprietary grants for Carolina were recorded in VA records.

A new charter for Carolina was issued in 1665 by Charles II to correct the boundaries of the 1663 charter.

As soon as the charter of 1662 was granted to the Proprietors, they immediately began the process of setting up a government. The first governmental unit that was established was the court system. It was, of course, based on the English law system.

Of prime importance in the English law system was the passing of land from one generation to another. Governed by strict rules whose roots were in English Common Law as well as English Legislative Law, land was at the heart of most law suits. One of these English laws was the Law of Primogeniture. This law states that the eldest son inherited the landed estate of the father. Additionally, he automatically inherited any personal property not specifically bequeathed to any one else. This law remained in effect in VA until the American Revolution, but it never had the force in NC that it had in VA, especially after the very earliest colonial period.

One result of this concentration on estate matters was that, from a very early period, the lower court system became largely administrative in nature. It was truly a mirror of the lives and times of the people of a county. It was here that estates, both testate and intestate, were probated. This probating of estates included a diverse body of records such as the appointment of Administrators, Guardians for minor children, apprenticing of children, many of whom were indigent or illegitimate, the allotment of the widow's dower as well as her years support, to name just a few. Transfer of both real and personal property was recorded in the deed records of the county. Charges of bastardy were heard by the lower court. Other areas of jurisdiction included bonds of all sorts for such things as permission to keep an ordinary (tavern), build a mill, or serve as a county official. The lower courts heard cases which involved less than 100£. Cases which involved more than 100£ in damages, or cases of treason, or cases appealed from the lower court were heard by the Colonial Higher Court. These Colonial Higher Court Records have been published by the NC State Archives. These published records are of tremendous help to the researcher, not only in that they have been transcribed from the 17th century handwriting, but they include an excellent index. Extremely reasonable in cost, they are a prime example of the dedication of our state archives to the preservation and publication of the historic records of NC.

While most of the history books dealing with the development of NC have been provided by men such as Dr. Wm. S. Powell, who has not only written wonderful historic texts on NC but who also compiled the NC Gazetteer, which is an indispensable tool to the genealogist, we also give credit to Corbit for his Formation of NC Counties.

By the same token, it is interesting to me, as a woman, to note that the major work in the transcribing, abstracting, and publication, of the records of the Lords Proprietors as well as records of the county levels have been carried out by women. Perhaps the reason for this can be found in the cultural roots that our society in the south was based on. While women had little status in the legal scheme of things they were regarded as the ones who nurtured and passed on the ideals and concepts of Southern society.

Some of our NC women have gained a national reputation, such as Margaret Hoffman, whose work in colonial land records is without par; Wynette Parks Haun, whose transcriptions of court and military records are nationally acclaimed; and Jo White Linn, whose work in the records of Old Rowan County has also set standards of excellence. Others, less well known nationally, who are producing a vast amount of published material dealing with the records of NC include such women as Ann McCallister, Grace Turner, Iris Harvey and her sister, Mrs. Wells, Frances H. Wynne, Elizabeth Ross, Kay Waters Sakaris, Betty Camin, and myself.

These women, whose works include land records, court minutes, tax records, voter registration records, marriage records, and abstracts of wills, have been encouraged by the moral support of Dr. Thornton W. Mitchell, immediate past Archivist, of NC; Dr. David Olsen, NC State Archivist; J. R. Lankford, Jr., Assistant NC State Archivist; Ed Morris Jr., Search Room Supervisor; and George Stevenson, Supervisor of Private Collections. These men have recognized that with each of these publications not only have steps been taken to preserve the historic records of the state, but that such books have made NC research more readily available to the general public.

Thus, in the works of our 20th century NC women, we see that they are still striving to preserve the family unit through their work in genealogical publishing.

Is Your Ancestor From Prussia?

Reprinted from The Illuminator, Zion Genealogical Society, Volume 5 #4, 1989, who reprinted it from Family Records Today, Volume 7.

To properly direct any genealogical inquiries, you must know more about the country from which your ancestor came from. For instance, telling someone that your ancestor came from Prussia is like saying that he settled east of the Mississippi River in the 19th century.

Prussia is a name that has been applied to almost three-fifths of the German Empire at one time or another. Included is the large mass of land on the southeast coast of the Baltic Sea. From 1701 the kingdom was ruled by the Hohenzollerns with Berlin as the capitol. Areas which at one time were under control of Prussia included:

Brandenburg
Electoral Hesse
Hesse-Nassau
Pomerania
Posen
Saxony
Thuringia
Silesia
Schleswig-Holstein
Westphalia
Poland (parts of)
Rhineland (parts of)
Mecklenburg
Cassubia and others
Duchies of:
Wenden and Crossen
Engern and Geldern
Magdeburg
Cleve and Juelich
Burg and Stettin

Carrie L. Broughton

First Woman Appointed to Head an Office in State Government as State Librarian

By Lynne White Belvin

Source: The News and Observer June, 1956.

Miss Carrie BROUGHTON went to work with State Library in 1902 and was appointed the State Librarian in 1917 when Captain M. O. SHERRILL, a one-legged Confederate veteran retired. Captain SHERRILL had praised Miss BROUGHTON in his annual reports as her efficiency had greatly helped the library's efforts. Her only "fault" that was regarded than as disqualifying her for such a major job was that she was a woman. Judge Walter CLARK, chief justice of the State Supreme Court, wanted her to have the job anyway, and he wrote:

> It's true, as some one has said, she is guilty of 'the atrocious crime of being a woman, but she is a taxpayer, a good citizen, experienced and thoroughly competent. I have found nothing in the constitution of this State which forbids a woman to be appointed to any office.

The judge then wrote the trustees of the library that he'd like to see her appointed. "She has filled the position of chief clerk acceptably for the last 16 years and in the absence and occasional illness of Capt. SHERRILL she has often discharged the duties of Librarian," he wrote. No one "knows the library more thoroughly than she or can discharge its duties more satisfactorily. It would seem that she has earned the promotion."

> "I hope that your board may see fit to reward the long and efficient service of Miss BROUGHTON by not refusing the appointment on account of alleged disqualifications which does not exist in fact, nor in the Constitution."

Judge Clark addressed his letters to Governor T. W. BICKETT, Secretary of State J. Bryan GRIMES, and Dr. J. Y. JOYNER, state superintendent of public instruction, trustees of the State Library. They did appoint her, as state librarian, and she held the job until Saturday June 30, 1956. Miss Carrie remarked at her retirement that she had such a hard time getting in that they never could get her out. She served for fifty-four years. She never married as she had been a part of the library and the library had been a part of her. The only part of her job that was really hard for her was appearing before the legislature's appropriations committee every two years. She made the appearances, however, and the library's appropriation went up with the passing of the years.

When she began work at the State Library in 1902, it was housed in three rooms in what was known as the Supreme Court Building. In 1914 the library moved to the southwest corner of Capital Square. The miscellaneous collection of books there had never been catalogued by any standard system of library classification. Miss BROUGHTON reorganized the entire library, cataloging the books according to the Dewey Decimal system.

No funds were available but with assistance from Miss Minnie W. LEATHERMAN, who was then secretary and director of the Library Commission, the task was completed in 1912. They separated the North Carolina items from the general works, making a special North Carolina collection.

Under her guidance, the library grew steadily with collection on all subjects which featured historical and genealogical collections. The genealogical and newspapers collections were considered the best on the eastern seaboard at the time of her retirement. Miss BROUGHTON was especially proud of the library's collection on Confederate History, which Dr. D. H. HILL helped select.

Miss BROUGHTON compiled the marriage and death notices from Raleigh papers from 1799 through 1893 and is of great value to genealogists. Four volumes of this work have been reprinted by the Clearfield Company Inc., 200 Eager St., Baltimore, Maryland, 21202.

Miss BROUGHTON was a Raleigh native, daughter of the famed printer Needham BROUGHTON for whom a high school was named. She was the aunt of our members: Frances P. Carroll and Susanne P. Whitley.

Evaluation of Evidence – 2 = 2 = 5 ?

By Jessie Jones

Source: VA/Piedmont Gen. Soc., Danville, VA. Volume XI, #3.

The Structure of Evidence

Primary Source

A legal document, representing your best proof. The person who recorded the document had:

1. Nothing to gain by doing it incorrectly.
2. Recorded it close to the time of the event.

Secondary Sources

Essentially everything else: Secondary sources must be proven with primary source data whenever possible, i.e., an obituary, a tombstone inscription, perhaps the family Bible.

Circumstantial Evidence

When indicators show that a particular event or relationship is probably true, but the all important primary source data (proof) is lacking. Use this material as a "clue."

Example: The census shows an elderly lady with the same surname as the Head of Household living next door… Could this be the paternal grandparent?

Process of Elimination

Following the path of evidence, the researcher systematically eliminates all persons or data which pertains to other family until only one remains.

Counting Procedures

5 points needed to prove a theory:

Primary source date	3 points
Secondary source	2 points
Circumstantial evidence	1 point
Process of elimination	1 point

Points to Consider

- Data derived from the same original source can only be counted once.
- The same source may have differing evidentiary values within itself.

By giving values to your sources you can document your family group sheet with facts and as being true. They will be referenced with several source documents: totaling at least a five-point value. If evidence shows a certain relationship, event, or data might be the case, this "theory" can be entered on your family group sheet in pencil and noted as "theory" only. Then take steps to prove this theory. Clues to your facts will show up all along the research path. Note them as they may open the way to facts.

Yes, perhaps 2 + 2 does = 5.

Writing and Publishing Your Family History

The following is taken from the newsletter of the Christian County Genealogical Society in Taylorsville, Illinois, Volume VI, #9, Oct. 1989 who reprinted it from St. Clair County Genealogical Society Newsletter Volume II, Number 12, December 1988. It was notes from a talk given by Dr. Arta F. Johnson in Columbus Ohio.

1. Write down all the family stories you hear. Add the date and the person who told it.
2. Identify all family photographs you can. Write on the back the full name and at least the approximate date.
3. Chemical prints from microfilm fade. Photocopy them immediately.
4. Germans used the same names over and over. A person of the right name in the right time period in the right village is not necessarily the right ancestor.
5. When you copy an entry in a church record, copy the entire entry. Never skip the baptismal sponsors.
6. Get a list of all possible descendants who will want the book. Try to know many copies to have printed.
7. Make friends with your genealogical society in the county of your interest. They can be a great help.
8. Get copies of all documents: vital statistics, church records, property deeds, etc.
9. Accept the fact that you probably will not find all the facts or documents you would like to have. Admit in print what you did not find.
10. Don't guess. If you can't prove something but you are sure you are right, label it NOT PROVED and give the evidence.
11. Present a copy of the book to the county genealogical society and to the public library where the immigrant generation lived.

Dr. Johnston said the greatest pleasure involved in working on a family history is in the hunting. It was "a love story" as she called it. When you are finished with your research, or have as much information as you can get, and are ready to have the book printed, choose your printer carefully. Also, DON'T FORGET TO ADD AN INDEX!!

JONES
My great-great grandfather, William H. JONES (b. 4 June 1790, Marlboro, NC) left NC around 1830 with his wife, Nancy, and 3 sons, Daniel, John A., and Levi to come to Alabama. I am told he had 2 sons, Nathaniel and Henry, who remained there. Daniel told a grandson that "he and a friend drove a gray mare hitched to two wheels of a wagon from Raleigh, NC to Alabama when he was young – with all his possessions tied up in a red bandanna pocket handkerchief." They settled in the area just south of Montgomery, AL and many descendants are still in that vicinity. I am very anxious to correspond with anyone who has knowledge of descendants of Nathaniel or Henry JONES or of William H. JONES' ancestors. I will share my information regarding William JONES' descendants in Alabama.

Keeping Count

Source: Kinship Tales, Volume 8, Number 4, Newsletter of the Grand Traverse Area Genealogical Society, Traverse City, Michigan

In days of old, tavern keepers would mark each purchase on a board or simply on the wall. Purchases were generally by the pint (p's) or by the quart (q's). Barmaids and customers were reminded to "watch your P's and Q's," i.e., keep track of how much money was owed.

Gentle Reminder

By Georg L. Ludrke

Source: The Illuminator, Zion Gen. Soc. Volume 5 # 4 who reprinted it from The Harold-Conroe, TX

When you start to examine the family tree, you're bound to be taking chances. Not so much what you'll find at the roots, as what's apt to fly out of the branches.

Franklin County Cemeteries, Vol. 1, by Gerald S. Boswell

This is the first in a planned series of cemetery books by Mr. Boswell. The series is certainly long overdue (in the view of any Franklin County researcher!). If the care devoted to the collection, arrangement, and exact instructions for locating the cemeteries is a harbinger of the future volumes, they will truly be an excellent search tool for the genealogists of that area. An every name index is included (bless you Mr. Boswell!) which I checked at random and found it correct in each instance.

Order from:

Gerald S. Bowell
Rt.2 Box 127

Cost is: $15.00 + $2.75 shipping & handling.
NC residents add 5% sales tax.
Purchase orders from libraries accepted.

The Joneses of Kentucky's Calloway and Marshall Counties 1820-1910 by Henry Earl Jones

Mr. Jones has obviously spent much time as well as effort in the genealogy of the JONESes of Calloway and Marshall counties. He has included a listing of where these various families lived prior to their moving to this section of Kentucky. Also included is an explanation on how to use the numbering system he devised (often lacking in so many books…to my sorrow!), maps and charts of the area, etc. And last, but far from least, an every name index.

Order from:

Southern Mycology
P.O. Box 982
Fairhope, AL 36533

Cost is $15.95 + $2.50 shipping & handling.

Many thanks to Weynette Parks Haun for donating the following volumes to the WCGS Library.

Chowan County, North Carolina, County Court Minutes Book III 1749-1754 by Weynette Parks Haun.

Once again the prolific pen (computer!) of Weynette has been busy to the delight of the genealogists, as well as historians. These are transcribed verbatim with an every name index. WCGS is indeed fortunate to have such a dedicated author as a member. She is regarded nationwide as an expert on court minutes. Cost of this book is $25.00 + 6% NC Sales Tax.

Craven County, North Carolina, County Court Minutes Book V 1757-1763 also by Weynette.

This series on Craven County Court Minutes is especially important to the genealogists who must contend with the missing Johnston and Dobbs county records. Book III of this series also deals with the pre-history of New Hanover County. Cost of Book V is $25.00 + 6% NC Sales Tax.

Johnston County, North Carolina, Deed Abstracts Vol. V 1795-1799 also by Weynette.

This volume covers deed books U-1, V-1, W-1, and X-1. With this series Weynette has exhibited the same meticulous research that is evident in her other works. The series begins with Volume I which covers the period 1759-1771 and is of important to not only the Dobbs county area but also to the Wake County researcher. Cost of this volume is $22.50 + 6% Sales Tax.

North Carolina Revolutionary Army Accounts Vols. V 7 VI, Part IV by Weynette.

Have you been frustrated in trying to prove military service for an ancestor? Well take heart since this wonderful series may well contain that proof! These are the North Carolina Revolutionary Army Accounts Secretary of State which Weynette has transcribed and then indexed it by every name. Cost is $25.00 + 6% NC Sales Tax.

Ordering Information*:*

Any of these books may be ordered directly from:

Weynette P. Haun
243 Argonne Dr.
Durham, NC 27704-1423

For a complete listing of her books please send an SASE (legal size) to Weynette.

Being Grateful

Source The Illuminator, Zion Genealogical Society, Volume 5, Number 4, 1989.
"Being Grateful" was reprinted by them from Valley Genealogist, Hemt, CA.

We keep forgetting those who lived before us, those who lived, and worked, and prayed and died so long before we were born.

We commit the sin of assuming everything begins with us.

We drink from the wells we did not dig.

We eat in the farmlands we did not develop.

We worship in the churches we did not organize or build.

We enjoy freedoms we have not earned.

We should be grateful for our heritage and in turn our minds in grateful appreciation to those who lived in another day, and under vastly differently circumstances, so that we can live a better life today.
