VOLUME 23, NUMBER 1 –WINTER/SPRING 2013

Wake County Genealogical Society

Post Office Box 17713
Raleigh, North Carolina 27619-7713

Wake County Genealogical Society, Inc. (WCGS) was organized in April 1982 to promote genealogical study and research, to serve as a medium of exchange of genealogical or historical information, to encourage the preservation of genealogical or historical records, to provide cultural, educational, and social opportunities involving genealogy. In 1983 WCGS was incorporated as a non-profit organization under the laws of the State of North Carolina.

Wake Treasures is the journal of the WCGS and is free to members. Semiannual issues are identified as Winter/Spring and Summer/Fall. Past issues of Wake Treasures are sold in volume sets. An order form is available on our website or can be requested via postal mail.

We endeavor to regularly publish primary source documents with historical or genealogical significance for Wake County, North Carolina. We will also publish primary source documents from related counties if there is no genealogical or historical society serving that county. We welcome articles about methodology and research experience as well as articles portraying Wake County residents, places, and events of the past. We seek a balance of time periods and hope to address the needs of both new and experienced genealogists.

Proposals and submissions may be sent by email or postal mail. References used to compile an article must be included. Depending on the nature of a submission, minor editing may be applied, but no substantive changes will be made. Errors in original documents that are transcribed should not be corrected, but notations may be made if they are clearly indicated.

WCGS makes every effort to present authentic original material. The Wake County Genealogical Society, Inc. and/or the editors of Wake Treasures cannot be held responsible for the accuracy or the publishing rights of the material furnished by contributors. This is the sole responsibility of the contributor. All material is published with the permission of the contributor. Documented content corrections that are submitted to the Editor will appear in a later issue. Permission to reproduce or quote from an article published in any issue of Wake Treasures must be obtained in writing from the author or authors. Write to the author in care of WCGS.

Styles Used in Abstracts and Transcriptions: In an attempt to provide consistency throughout Wake Treasures, the Journal Committee has adopted the following styles to be used in all abstracts or transcriptions.

- Spelling – Retained as found in the original document.
- Surnames – Capitalized and bold, even in word-for-word transcriptions.
- ? following a word – Letters difficult to read, but it looks like (DUW ?) or there is a second possibility (PANN/PAW ?).
- ? following a letter in a word – Uncertain of the preceding letter (MU?RRY).
- ... – Words, phrases or sentences are omitted from the original.
- Word – Word, phrase or sentence marked through in original document.
- Tho_as or Tho__s – Letter or letters illegible or missing.
- _____ – Word illegible or missing.
- [Anything in brackets] – Comment from abstractor or transcriber.

Other Notations:

- NC Archives – The short form for the Reference Unit of the Division of Archives and History, North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.
- CR.099.000/AR 6.0/etc. – The call or stack numbers used by the NC Archives to organize the storage of records.

CARING FOR YOUR DOCUMENTS, BOOKS AND IMAGES

By Jennifer French, Objects Conservator, NC Museum of History

Your personal documents, books and family photos are as historical as those objects collected by the North Carolina Museum of History. It is important to sustain and store them for future generations. The following information illustrates the causes of deterioration for books, paper and images and how to preserve your family documents.

Family documents can be comprised of many types of objects. Letters, awards, certificates, bibles, magazines, negatives, posters and photos are but a few examples of what a family document could be described as. They are a unique part of our lives and are therefore highly valued. Documents, books and images can be made from a wide range of materials which are affected by such environmental factors such as temperature, humidity, light, pests and air pollution. Reducing the impact of these agents of deterioration through safe handling, storage and display practices will slow down the rate of decay and prevent damage to your object.

Handling

- Wash hands thoroughly with soap and water and dry them completely. Do not apply hand lotion or anything with a scent afterwards and remove any jewelry, especially those with stones in them.
- When handling photos or negatives, only handle the edge of the object and wear polyethylene gloves. This will prevent the transfer of fingerprints, oils and acids onto the emulsion.
- Always support the object when moving from one place to another. If they have been previously encapsulated or framed, leave the object in its support. Use acid free tissue or card stock as a support. If the support is metal or wood, place a piece of acid free tissue in between the object and the support.

Light

Both visible and ultraviolet light can cause significant damage to documents, books and images even at low light levels when exposed for an extended period of time. Fading, discoloration of dyes, pigments and inks and the deterioration of the materials the object is made of are but a few examples of the damage due to light exposure.

- Display paper and images out of direct light. This can be sunlight or artificial light from a lamp source.
- Have UV film placed on your windows in rooms where your objects are being displayed. This can be purchased at your local hardware store.
- Close blinds and curtains in those rooms that are not being used during the day.
- If displaying a book while open, rotate the pages that are being displayed to reduce preferential fading.

Temperature and Relative Humidity

High temperatures and relative humidities can lead to mold growth, the softening of gelatin emulsion on images and glues holding books together, and promote insect activity. However, very low humidities can reduce the amount of moisture in the object resulting in brittleness and tears. Extreme fluctuations of both temperature and humidity can cause stress to the object, leading to tears and breaks in the materials.

- Store your documents and images in a cool, dry place.
- Avoid storing your documents in basements and attics. Keep them in the main part of your house, preferably not against an exterior wall.
- Avoid displaying your objects near windows, doors, and vents. These areas will have the greatest fluctuations.
- The more barriers between your object and the environment, the better. This will reduce the effect of environmental fluctuations on your object.
- Routinely check your object in storage for damage and deterioration of both your object and its storage materials.
- If you find mold on your object, isolate immediately from the rest of your collection to prevent the spread of the mold and call a conservator for advice.

Housekeeping

Regular housekeeping will remove the majority of dust and debris in the air and any potential grazing insects from your home. Insects such as silverfish, beetles, and moths will feed on your documents and images and can cause considerable damage to your family collections if not checked.

- Monitor your storage areas and boxes for mold and insect activity on a regular basis.
- Check for damage to your objects. Look for tears, lifting paint layers and surfaces, mold and insect damage. If any of these factors are observed, contact a conservator for further advice.
- It is not recommended that you remove dust and debris from your papers without consulting a conservator first. Depending on the media of the object, irreversible damage can be caused if cleaned.
- If you have a photo or negative that needs to be cleaned, call a conservator. Do not clean the photo or negative yourself.
- Books that are in good condition can be gently cleaned of dust using a clean and soft natural haired brush. One should place the book on a clean table and gently remove the dust by brushing towards a vacuum hose that has been covered in netting (to prevent original fragments from being sucked into the vacuum). Do not use the vacuum directly on the object.

Display

When displaying your family documents and images, always keep in mind the nature of the materials being displayed. Many woods and paper products have acids in them that can then affect the object being displayed. Always look and ask for 'archival' or 'acid free' materials when determining how the object is to be displayed. Acid-free materials can be found through several sources. Please see the Reference Section below for two suppliers and contact the museum for a list of suppliers.

- Always use spacers and/or have a mat board between your paper/photo object and the glass or acrylic front. Should the humidity rise, there is a chance that the media could soften and stick to the glass or acrylic.
- Use UV filtered glass or acrylic when framing a paper object or image. Frame shops may offer this under 'Museum' glass or 'Archival' glass.

- When displaying a book, especially if it is to be open while on display, make sure that you have an acrylic mount that is slightly bigger and will support the spine of the book without putting undue stress on the spine. If the book will not remain open on its own, secure it down with strips of thin Mylar and thin double stick tape (both of which can be obtained through archival supply stores). Do not force the book flat. This will only damage the spine and text block.

Storage

As with displaying your objects, the storage materials used should be of 'archival' or 'acid-free' materials.

- Separate letters from envelopes and store them separate from each other. By leaving the letter in the envelope, deterioration due to acidity can increase. Images in albums should also be removed and the album stored separately.
- If there are no tears or holes and the paper isn't brittle and can be moved without tearing, then unfold your paper object as much as possible depending on the size of the object and how big your storage area is. This will reduce the amount of handling of the object in the future.
- When in storage, paper objects, books and photos should be encapsulated. This will allow you to handle the object without damaging it or introducing any oils or acids from your hands. Encapsulation will also help protect the object from deterioration from environmental extremes. Should the object deteriorate or already be in poor condition, encapsulation can also keep all the pieces in one place until a conservator is consulted. Encapsulation can be opaque or transparent, dependent on your needs and requirements and can be found at archival supply stores.

Conservation Assistance Day

If you are not sure what your document, book or photo object needs for proper display and storage, a good local resource is the North Carolina Museum of History's Conservation Assistance Day. Held four times a year in January, April, July and October, you can make a half hour appointment to have your objects, paper or otherwise, examined by the Objects or Textile Conservator. You can bring up to three objects per conservator who will advise you on the condition of your object, whether you need to have your object treated by a conservator, and what you need to properly display and store your objects. Please contact Jan Sweatt at 919 / 807-7823 to make an appointment.

References

To find a conservator in your area, a great resource is the American Institute of Conservation's (AIC) 'Find A Conservator' program at www.conservation-us.org under the Resource Center tab (on the left hand side). Please make sure to read 'How Should I Choose A Conservator' and 'Frequently Asked Questions' first, which is located in the same section, before selecting a conservator.

Also under the Resource Center on the AIC website is 'Caring for Your Treasures'. These are small pamphlets on how to take care of your family heirlooms based on the materials they are primarily made of. They are free of charge and can be downloaded/printed from the website.

There are two archival supply stores that are generally used to purchase storage and display materials. They are:

Gaylord – www.gaylord.com

University Products – www.universityproducts.com

Some archival supplies can also be found at art stores and craft stores. For example, acid free tissue can be found at the Container Store. Please remember to confirm that the product says 'archival' or 'acid-free'.

HOME IS WHERE THE HEARTH IS, PARTS 1, 2, AND 3

Karen's Korner, By Karen Bennett

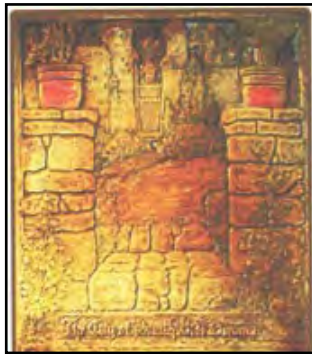

Source: Reprinted from Whittier Historic Neighborhood Association NEWS, May 2009, Volume X, Issue 2; September 2009, Volume X, Issue 3; and January 2010, Volume XI, Issue 1

It was the center of life in the colonial cottage and the pioneer cabin, the source of warmth, of light and of fire for cooking. When it was no longer required to provide these functions, it persisted in our culture as a gathering place and focal point, continuing to be built into a high percentage of quality houses. It was the iconic center of every home designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. And of course, it was and is the portal for Santa Claus. It has always been the place that symbolized home and invites us to coziness, to celebrations, and into the circle of family and friends. It is the fireplace.

Even given the results of the Whittier earthquake, the variety and number of original fireplaces in the interiors of the homes in our neighborhood is remarkable, a sort of catalogue of early twentieth century craftsmen, materials and design that has prompted me to want to write a series of articles about them. Some of these fireplaces are fully functional, some are not, or never were, but with or without a lighted fire, there is no doubt that the fireplace itself is one of the most prominent and compelling aesthetic features of a home.

The first article will establish some terms that can be used to identify and describe the major parts of a fireplace that are visible from within a home's interior. Future articles will deal with styles exemplifying various architectural styles, specific materials such as types of tile, brick and stone, and craftsmen and companies including prominent art tile makers such as Ernest Batchelder, whose work graces our neighborhood.

Although the mantel shelves on our original fireplaces are often wood, and, particularly in Victorian examples, portions of the rest of the mantelpiece might also be wood, the hearth and mantel materials nearest the firebox were always built of nonflammable materials. Examples of such materials include stone, concrete or "cast stone", brick, and ceramic tile, all of which appear in various forms in our neighborhood.

Batchelder Fireplace Tile

In the era in which most of our houses were built, one of the best known and popular makers of fireplace tile, as well as tile for other uses, was Ernest Batchelder. He produced tile from 1909 to 1932, starting at his home in Pasadena and growing through several partnerships to a large factory in Los Angeles. His products were sold all over the country, tiles being ordered from the factory and assembled by a tile setter on site. Batchelder tiles were molded by hand, have a matte finish, and were of various shades of browns and greenish blue, sometimes with a dusky brown contrasting against a greenish blue background. Tiles could be purchased in any combination, the numerous catalog choices ranging from unadorned "field" tiles, typically 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ " $\times$ 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ ", used alone or with small or somewhat larger tiles depicting birds, animals, plants, medieval or Mayan themes, to ensembles creating entire fireplaces of tile with corbelled mantelshelf, bordered hearth, ornamented arch or hood over the firebox, and fireplace facing with a combination of large pictorial tiles such as "The City of Hearthsides Dreams" group, and the "Old Lace Design" group, both to be found in our neighborhood.

A Glossary of Fireplace Terms*

Mantelshelf – Sometimes simply called the mantel, this is the part of the mantelpiece that forms a shelf upon which decorative objects are often set.

Mantelpiece – The fittings and ornamental embellishments surrounding a fireplace. Note that the facing immediately surrounding the opening to the firebox is sometimes referred to as the fireplace surround, particularly if it is of a different material than the rest of the mantelpiece.

Firebox – The part of the fireplace in which the fire is contained.

Hearth – The fire-resistant floor within the firebox and immediately in front of the fireplace.

Inglennook – A recessed space adjacent to some fireplaces, often containing seating.

*Some of the definitions are based on material found in Steven J. Phillips, Old House Dictionary: An Illustrated Guide to American Domestic Architecture (1600-1940), the Preservation Press, 1992.

An original Batchelder fireplace adds considerable value to a home. It should also be noted that there were other companies that produced similar earth tone, matte finish fireplace tiles, that are also very beautiful and valuable. If you think you might have a Batchelder or similar fireplace, avoid chipping or scratching the tiles, clean only very gently using no abrasives, and guard against moisture from plumbing leaks, etc. which can damage both the body and surface of these tiles.

Batchelder-Style

Arroyo stone fireplace in the home of neighbor Doris Arcadi.

Some sort of masonry is the underlying material in nearly all of our fireplaces, and unadorned masonry is also often the material visible inside the house. This may be bricks of various sorts, or stone. Sometimes the chimney and outdoor portion of the structure may be brick, while the interior is faced with stones, various types of which we have here in our neighborhood. Because of its availability and rugged good looks, arroyo stone (also called arroyo boulders) was used extensively as a local fireplace material in Southern California during the bungalow era. We have fewer arroyo stone fireplaces in our neighborhood than might be found in Pasadena or Claremont, which more closely skirt the mountains. However, here, on the southeast corner of Broadway and Washington Avenue, there is a beautiful example of both a porch and chimney built of arroyo stone which also graces the fireplace inside the house.

Another historic fireplace material was called "cast stone." This was actually precast concrete molded as individual blocks in rustic stone-like textures (not to be confused with the sheets of false stone available from "home improvement" stores today), or cast into entire fireplace units ready for assembly and installation. One of the "cast stone" fireplace units in our neighborhood is identical to that made by the Tay-Mac Co. and marketed by the Standard Building Investment Company of Los Angeles and San Diego. Their Bungalow Book of 1910 illustrates this model "cast stone" fireplace with its relief of the Santa Barbara Mission under the mantel and it is pictured by Robert Winter in his 1980 history, The California Bungalow. This fireplace was intended to connect to operable footings and chimney, but a chimney was not built for the one in our neighborhood. But with or without a roaring fire, this fireplace, with its romantic reference to early California, has more than enough power to warm its 1920 bungalow and inhabitants.

HOUSES

By Virginia Greene DePriest

Houses are records of people. Experts can tell from the house you build and live in what kind of person you are.

The old houses in Cleveland County tell a story of the people who made [them]. From the earliest dates of settlement, probably in the 1730s or 1740s, our county has a record of people acting in a positive manner by creating houses.

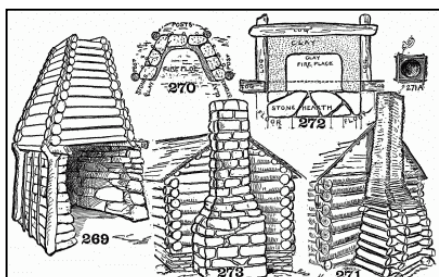

None of the earliest houses survive, of course. They were probably built very much like the Indian bark houses, or else they were made of the cane that grew in profusion in the area. Today some pre-revolutionary houses are still standing, and quite a number of houses survive from the 1800-1850 period. Many Queen Anne, or Victorian, houses of the 1870-1914 period are in fine repair, and many are being lived in.

Source: Maidu Indian Bark Houses at The Old Burton Ranch

By 1765, when the Indian wars were settled, many people were living west of the Catawba River. Two main sources brought settlers into this area. Those were the Great Philadelphia Wagon Road, which originated in Pennsylvania and came down the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia into the Salisbury area; and the Indian Trading Path from the Virginia Coast near Williamsburg into the Cherokee Nation. Some of our families came up Broad River which, then, was part of a navigable system of rivers that flowed into the harbor at Charleston, S.C. Some few people came from the eastern part of the state. English, Scotch-Irish, and Germans form the basis of our population, and each nationality contributed its own life-style to the type of house it built. These thrifty farmers were also the basis for Cleveland County's predominately agricultural economy.

One-room log houses, centered around a chimney with a large fireplace, were typical of the early permanent houses. A few people imported or made their own brick, and a few more obtained boards from which to erect their houses. William Green had a sawmill on Sandy Run Creek in the late 1700s [where lumber could be cut and cured].

Source: Stick Chimney - Detail for fireplaces and flues

As the family grew, or became more elegant, other rooms were added, and new houses enlarged the one-room pattern. With the added rooms came added fireplaces, one to a room. Chimneys, more than any other thing, controlled the plan of a house. Probably the first chimneys in this area were "stick," that is, sticks or small logs heavily covered with mud. Sometimes these chimneys were so massive that they could stand alone even though they were part of the house wall. Most of the mass of the chimney was on the outside because in these one-room cabins there was no room on the inside for it. And the huge fireplace, the core of the chimney, on the inside, was the heart of the house.

Not only did the fireplace give warmth and light, it also provided means for the family to cook. A fire was one of the more important things in a colonial family's life. If the family let its fire go out, someone had to go to the nearest house to "borrow a chunk of fire." And those who frequently had to "borrow" fire were considered idle. Perhaps some of you can remember having houses pointed out to you in which the same fire had been burning more than one hundred years.

Cabins at first had dirt floors. Later sand was added, and many a child learned his letters by marking in the sand. Still later, the nicer houses had wide boards used for the floor. Only old smokehouses in this area seem to have survived with dirt floors.

Two other house features are particularly Southern. One is the porch. Even the crudest cabin in the 19th century had a porch. As the size of the houses grew through the years, the porches also grew...some almost all the way around the house. Queen Anne houses are typical of the large elaborate, around-three-sides porch. Victorians took great pride in the “gingerbread” decoration around their porches and balustrades. The second strictly Southern feature was the “raised” house upon fairly tall pillars so that air could circulate underneath and make the house cooler.

WAKE, GRANVILLE AND ORANGE COUNTY 1782 PETITION

By Diane L Richard

Source: NC General Assembly Records (GASR), Apr-May 1783, Box 1, Folder: Misc Petitions at the NC Archives (Raleigh, NC)

18th Century petitions are a great resource for original signatures, identifying who is in a community (given that Wake has no extant 1784/1787 state census this is a nice near-time partial substitute) and sometimes helps facilitate connecting family units by “who” signed and in what sequence. Additionally, “signing a petition” is one of the ways that an ancestor may qualify for Revolutionary War service if you are considering applying to a lineage society. The date on this particular petition, since it’s between 1776 and 1783, is relevant.

Note: Spelling is shown as it is in the original document.

Case of B. S. King v. Wiatt Harrison

North Carolina, Wake County.
Court of Pleas & Quarter Sessions
May Term, 1826.
Case of B. S. King v. Wiatt Harrison.

The undersigned, Referees in the above case, having heard evidence in it, are of opinion, that the Negro Lucy, sold to the Plaintiff by the Defendant in May, 1825, could not be considered other than a sound and healthy Negro at the time of sale; for though she had a short but serious sickness while in the service of Dr. Beckwith in the year 1824, and another attack while in the service of Sam^l Avera in the spring of the following year, it does not appear that she had any serious sickness afterwards until April 1827 (a period of about two years) though since that time, it appears that she has been subject to monthly attacks of sudden illness, which generally disable her for a day; but as evidence was adduced to show that the Plaintiff himself considered the Negro sound and healthy previous to that time, and in several instances offered her for sale as such, said Referees are of opinion, that the Defendant ought not to be answerable to the Plaintiff in damages for having sold her in an unsound and unhealthy condition. The Plaintiff will of course, be subject to the Costs of suit.

In Testimony whereof

The undersigned, Referees in the above case, having heard evidence in it, are of opinion, that the Negro Lucy, sold to the Plaintiff by the Defendant in May, 1825, could not be considered other than a sound and healthy Negro at the time of sale; for though she had a short but serious sickness while in the service of Dr. Beckwith in the year 1824, and another attack while in the service of Sam^l Avera in the spring of the following year, it does not appear that she had any serious sickness afterwards until April 1827 (a period of about two years) though since that time, it appears that she has been subject to monthly attacks of sudden illness, which generally disable her for a day; but as evidence was adduced to show that the Plaintiff himself considered the Negro sound and healthy previous to that time, and in several instances offered her for sale as such, said Referees are of opinion, that the Defendant ought not to be answerable to the Plaintiff in damages for having sold him an unsound and unhealthy Negro. The Plaintiff will of course, be subject to the Costs of suit.

Allen Utley & Wardens of the Poor vs. Jacob Buffalow

To the Clerk of the County Court of Wake, North Carolina

Deposition of Kimbrough Brown in the suit Allen Utley to Jacob Buffalow

[Signatures and Seals] Wil[l] Poole], Tho^s Cobb

State of North Carolina

To William R. Poole & Thomas Cobb, Esquires, of the County of Wake, Greeting:

We reposing especial trust and confidence in your integrity, do authorise and empower you to cause Kimbrough Brown to appear before you, at such time and place as you may appoint, and an oath to examine touching all such matters and things as he shall know of concerning a certain matter of controversy in our Court of Pleas and Quarter Sessions, for the County of Wake pending, wherein Allen Utley &c. is Plaintiff, and Jacob Buffalow is Defendant. And these depositions in writing by you so taken, the same to transmit, sealed with your seals, to our Court to be held for the said County, on the third Monday in Feb^y next, to be read in evidence in behalf of Deft in said controversy.

Witness, B. S. King, Clerk of our said Court, the 26 day of Nov 1833.

B. S. King, C.C.

Wake County

In obescena [?] to the annexed Commission to us directed Kimbrough Brown appeared before us and having been duly sworn upon the Holy evangelist of Almighty God deposeth and with that he was at the house of Jacob Buffalow of said County sometime in the latter part of the year 1832 when a certain negro girl Gincy then living with Allen Utley the overseer of John Hutchins came to the home of said Buffalow in the morning between day break and sunrise and upon being asked by the wife of the Defendant what she wanted said a chunk of fire when she also laid she had brought some flour out there that she [w]anted them to take care of until she could get [a] chance to send it to her child and was directed by Mrs. Buffalow to take it away and she replied that she would not carry it back to Utley's if she did they would eat it up and that she would not buy flour for them to eat. Mrs. Buffalow then stated to her that she might put it in the kitchen in a large bread tray until she could get a chance to ____ it away.

He further states that he heard John Hutchins acknowledge that he gave the flour to the girl and directed her to carry it to Jacob Buffalow's house and had gotten Burrel Pool to see it carried therefore [th]e purpose of seeing if Buffalow could rece[ive] it and that he had heard reports that he would trade with negroes and that he had the flour carried there for the purpose of seeing whither he would received it or not. He further states that Burrel Pool stated to him that Hutchins told him that he had given the Negro girl the flour and had gotten him to go with him to Buffalows to see it delivered. He also states that the Defendant nor the wife of the defendant received the flour and that there was no trade made between them further this Deponent saith not.

CIVIL WAR SOUTHERN CLAIMS COMMISSION

Southern Claims – Oft Overlooked When They Shouldn’t Be!

Ah, Southern Claims. When it comes to the civil war, so many people get focused on Civil War service (whether Union or Confederate) and related pensions. Some will look at the Freeman’s Bureau records and very very few look at Southern Claims.

Some of the “collected” material below will go into detail about the Southern Claims Commission and the short version is that after the war, those loyal to the “Union” wanted compensation for stores taken etc. As with all situations where money was involved, many filed claims, many of these claims were rejected (or disallowed) and a select few were actually compensated for all or part of what was claimed.

As with any government enterprise, this means there is a wonderful paper trail created whether a claim was honored or disallowed. As with all paper trails, you might find mentions of extended family, the names of five (5) witnesses called, testimony given, the nature of what was “taken,” and much more.

The petition of Berry Bagwell, respectfully represents:

That your petitioner is a resident of the County of Wake in the State of North Carolina; that his post office address is Wake in said County and State; and that at the time his claim and each item thereof as herein set forth occurred, he was a resident of the County of Wake and State of North Carolina; that he is the original owner of said claim; that he has never sold, assigned or transferred the same or any part thereof to any person, that no mortgage, bill of sale or other lien of like nature has at any time rested upon it, or any part thereof, nor has it been attached or taken in execution; that the same has not been paid by the United States or any of their officers or agents, nor have the United States any legal offset against the same or any part thereof; that he is the sole owner of the said claim, no other person being interested therein; that said claim does not contain any charge for property which was destroyed or stolen by the troops or other persons; that the rates or prices charged are reasonable and just, and do not exceed the market rate or price of like stores or property at the time and place stated; all of which your petitioner states to his own knowledge.

Your petitioner further states that he is now and was at the time the several items of his said claim occurred, as stated herein, a citizen of the United States; that he remained a loyal adherent to the cause and Government of the United States, during the war of 1861, &c.; and was so loyal before and at the time of the taking or furnishing of the property for which this claim is made.

And your petitioner further represents, and of his own knowledge states, that on the 13 day of April A. D. 1865, at his Residence in the State of North Carolina, the following property or stores were taken from him by your petitioner for the use of the army of the United States, and for which payment is claimed, viz:

	Dollars	Cts.
April 13 one horse good	100	00
2 good mixed Cows & calves	60	00
3 head of sheep	16	00
4 15 barrels corn at 70¢	105	00
5 2500 pounds of fodder	25	00
6 1 saddle & harness	15	00
7 saddles & colchies &c	10	00
8 kitchen utensils & crockery &c	15	00

She claims to have been loyal and two of her neighbors attest ~~their~~ loyalty. —

~~As~~ She had a farm of 140 acres on which she lived, We regret that we are obliged to regard her furnishing of clothing to the Confederate service as disloyal. Her ideas were clear & strong & admirably expressed as to the character & conduct of the war. —

I rely upon the following witnesses, and others, to prove my loyalty:

M. D. Britt	residing in	Wake Co.
E. D. Hams	residing in	Wake Co.
Eli Dupree	residing in	Wake Co.
Alvin Dupree	residing in	Wake Co.
James Dupree	residing in	Wake Co.

Page 12 – Cabot Powell (1877) witnesses named – SNIPPET

Mr. Powell lived on his farm about 7 miles from Raleigh in Wake Co. N. C. He claims to have been a Union man in the beginning, as were very many of the citizens of Wake Co. — But was unable to resist the current of the rebellion & went with it. —

In 1862 he was drafted & carried to Weldon where he remained two months guarding bridges & commissary stores. — He felt bad in days for it was against his principles. —

In 1863 he was again employed on staff for 6 months hunting deserters. He did not refuse "because if he had he would have been flogged".

He had a son, two sons-in-law & two brothers in the Confederate Army. He sent them all provisions & to his son $40. in money. —

He is quoted.

Do check out these compilations of information abstracted from these claims. If you see the name of one of your ancestors, or one of a neighbor, consider acquiring the file. You never know what "neat" information you might learn.

[Abstractor's Note: A records search on Fold3 <http://www.fold3.com/s.php#query=north+carolina&s_place=wake&ocr=1&t=12> shows the following results: Approved = 791; Barred and Disallowed = 3,267. These numbers probably include every mention of the terms: "North Carolina, Wake County," meaning it could include 3 mentions in one document and 30 mentions in one person's file.]

“The Southern Claims Commission”

From Southern Loyalists in the Civil War: The Southern Claims Commission

By Gary B. Mills, Baltimore, MD: Genealogical Publishing Co., Inc., 1994

Not everyone who lived within the boundaries of the Confederate States of America was in favor of secession. Throughout the Civil War there were Southerners who supported the Union. These supporters usually fell into one of three categories: those who kept their views to themselves, those who openly supported the Union, and those who fled the South leaving family and property behind. Some religious groups, such as the Quakers, remained neutral during the conflict due to their pacifist beliefs. However, when the Union troops arrived in the South everyone suffered.

On March 3, 1871, Congress created a way for pro-Union Southerners to request reimbursement for some of their losses. The Southern Claims Commission established guidelines by which they would accept claims:

1. the applicant must hold American citizenship
2. the applicant must reside in a state that seceded
3. the applicant could document loyalty to the federal government throughout the conflict
4. the applicant suffered official confiscation of goods.

The three-man Commission reviewed the application and evidence, accepted additional testimony, and determined the loyalty of the claimant and recommended an amount for reimbursement. The Commission filed a report at the start of each congressional session with the House of Representatives who had final approval for each claim. If the representatives approved the claim they then determined the amount to be reimbursed.

The Commission received approximately 22,298 claims from individuals, family groups, churches, and businesses for $60,258,150. Between 1871 and March 1880, the date the Commission finally closed, only 7,092 (approximately one-third) of the claimants received any reimbursement. The approved claims totaled $4,636,929.69 and nearly all applicants received an amount greatly reduced from their initial request.

Basically each case file, now maintained by the National Archives and Records Administration in Washington, DC, includes the following:

1. the claim petition and supporting papers
2. the deposition of relevant witnesses (neighbors, ex-slaves, relatives, etc.)
3. comments by the agent assigned to investigate the claim
4. a Treasury Department report regarding its search of captured Confederate records for evidence of Union disloyalty or Southern sympathy on the part of the claimant
5. the final report and recommendation by the Commission

Not all case files still exist. Additional resources within the National Archives may help reconstruct some claims as well as provide supplemental information. Some of the resources include

1. personal accounts of how the loss occurred and associated events
2. military records for claimants or male relatives
3. family letters and/or Bible records
4. personal descriptions
5. property inventories
6. travelogs
7. wills and probate records

Witness depositions show answers to over 130 questions including relationship to the claimant, place(s) of residence during the war, military service, and knowledge of the claimant's wartime activities and alleged losses. It is recommended that researchers review all the files from a particular community due to the extensive information they contain.

Wake County claimants listed in Southern Loyalist in the Civil War: The Southern Claims Commission, a directory of case files created by the U. S. Commissioner of Claims, 1871-1880.

NC Claims to the Southern Claims Commission, Records of the Southern Claims Commission at the National Archives and Records Administration, M87, Rolls 13 and 14, Record Group 56

A word regarding the methodology used in creating this file. I had to use two indices to get this data: M87 roll 13 which had a county by county list of claimants and roll 14 which had the national Alphabetical index. These indices were type written and there was some discrepancies found between the two. I have attempted to note any major ones such as a name listed in the County index but not found in the Alpha or listed in the County but the Alpha indicates the person was filing from another state. Smaller ones such as spelling differences, I relied upon the Alpha index. Also, I do not have access to all the claims so I have no feel for whether ALL NC claimants are indexed. Hopefully, I can get a truer picture and fill in some of the data holes when I finish the County listings as I then will verify those names against the Alpha index to catch any claim missed. If the file number matches someone listed in the county index but not found previously, I will assign that person to the county. All others found but not listed in the county index will be assigned to a county classification of Unknown.

From the National Archives description of this series:

"An act of Congress, approved March 3, 1871, provided that the President nominate three commissioners of claims (to be confirmed by the Senate) to receive, examine, and consider the claims of "those citizens who remained loyal adherents to the cause and the Government of the United States during the war, for stores or supplies taken or furnished during the rebellion for the use of the Army of the United States in States proclaimed as in insurrection against the United States." By an act approved May 11, 1872, this clause was extended to include property used by the Navy. The commissioners were to satisfy themselves of the loyalty of each claimant; certify the amount, nature, and value of the property taken or furnished; report their judgment on each claim in writing to the House of Representatives at the beginning of each session of Congress, hold their sessions in Washington; and keep a journal of their proceedings and a register of all claims brought before them. The act provided further that of the claims within its provisions only those presented to the commissioners could be prosecuted, and that all others were to be barred. This microfilm publication reproduces records of the Commissioner of Claims (otherwise known as the Southern Claims Commission) dated between March 10, 1871, and June 29, 1880, and also a few papers dated as early as March 29, 1864, and as late as April 17, 1900."

Admission of Women

By a vote of the Trustees at their annual meeting in February, 1897, women are admitted to graduate courses on the same conditions with men, and enjoy the same privileges.

By an extension of these conditions, women are now admitted to all higher courses in the University and may be enrolled in the regular Junior and Senior classes in candidacy for undergraduate degrees.

Graduates of accredited institutions receive free tuition. Others will be charged a fee according to the amount of work taken.

Candidates for admission should always correspond with some member of the Advisory Committee with reference to their proposed work. The Advisory Committee consists of the following:—

President Alderman
Professor Venable
Professor Gore
Professor Alexander

ABANDONED NORTH CAROLINA

By Diane L Richard

Repairs
from Mary Ann Potter

I was introduced to the “Abandoned NC” page, <http://www.flickr.com/groups/abandonednc/>, on the flickr website. It ends up that you can search on “Wake County” and get a subset of photos that pertain to Wake County. Whether you currently live in Wake County or whether you are researching in Wake County as a locale where your ancestors lived, I thought you might enjoy these images! They give you a fascinating glimpse of the county as it is and also as it was.

Sit back and enjoy. If a particular image catches your eye or you are curious as to the details, please click on the photographers link (as provided below), check out the full-sized image, and contact the photographer.

All images have been included here with the express permission of the following photographers who own the copyright to their own images. Do NOT reproduce these images without their permission. Information about each photographer including any “specific” copyright information is included below.

I am very appreciative that these photographers granted WCGS permission to use their photos in this montage to give us a visual view of Wake County.

Do recognize that these are not “ALL” the images found in this collection. There are many more by these and other photographers and new photos being added all the time.
